

All proceeds from the sale of this book will go directly to The Water Project, a non-profit organization that helps people like Asha get access to clean, safe drinking water. Asha is a twelve-year old girl living in Sub-Saharan Africa. Instead of attending school or playing with friends, she walks kilometers every day to fetch water that will most likely make her and her family sick. She accepts her fate until the illness of her younger brother and the hope of change from an aid organization turns her life upside down.
